

DEAF-BLIND RESOURCES

The term deaf-blindness refers to any combination of vision and hearing losses, not necessarily complete deafness and complete blindness. Most individuals who are deaf-blind have some useful vision and/or hearing, while others may have no residual sight or hearing. There is a wide range of cognitive and developmental ability among individuals who are deaf-blind. Because deaf-blindness is a combination of vision and hearing losses, no two individuals who are deaf-blind have the same needs.

Children who are deaf-blind need early intervention to increase their interest and understanding of the world around them. The information that most children acquire naturally must be introduced deliberately and systematically to children who are deaf-blind.

Many individuals who are deaf-blind need to utilize the services of a Support Service Provider (SSP). A SSP is a sighted person (deaf, hard of hearing or hearing) that works with a person who is deaf-blind. SSPs provide: sighted guiding, environmental, visual and auditory descriptions, facilitate communications with others, transportation and other assistive services.
